The emergence of on-demand delivery services has created a unique situation for insurance companies

If you're delivering food for UberEATS, Postmates, Seamless, Door Dash To Go, or a similar service, it's important to remember one of the key rules of auto insurance: using your vehicle for business and the transportation of goods is typically not allowed.

Most carriers' Personal Auto Policy forms exclude Business Use. Rather than find this out after an accident occurs, either by your fault or not, please contact me to discuss your carrier's specific rules regarding this exposure.

Shankland Insurance writes for several carriers, and we've found that many of them will deny coverage based on this exclusion. We do have some carriers that will NOT exclude coverage – SO PLEASE CONTACT ME ASAP TO DISCUSS YOUR OPTIONS!
